

POLITICAL PARADE

By Clem Whitaker

It's an old American custom for the people back home to hurl brickbats and epithets at their duly elected legislative representatives.

It's the privilege of every free-born American—a rough-and-tumble means of self-expression that makes for real democracy.

But during the next few weeks, watch out! The worm may turn! Legislatures may start barking back at the voters who elected them!

For legislative tempers, toward the end of a long, hard fought session, are bound to get short. And punch-drunk lawmakers—given enough provocation—are bound to get sore, even though their jobs depend on public favor.

Whether the legislators, this year, cast precedent and caution to the winds and shout their grievances from the house-tops, instead of muttering in their beards, will depend on the attitude of the folks back home.

Thus far, bono publico has consistently demanded economy, with a capital E. And the majority of the lawmakers, feeling that the time has come to call a halt in mounting State expenditures, have fought vigorously and successfully to cut the State budget and defeat new tax proposals.

But the time has now arrived in the legislative halls for the consideration of "special appropriations"—the special favors that in ordinary times are demanded in every legislator's district; the monuments, bridges, special roads, colleges, experiment stations and miscellaneous bric-a-brac which are dear to the heart of the community.

And there are more than $300,000,000 worth of such civic nicknacks reposing in the bill hopper. The "pork" in the "pork barrel" is simply stupendous!

But the legislatures, at least at this moment, are of a mind to salt down the pork and keep it in storage for years when their constituents can better afford it. The people have demanded economy. And they mean to give it to them—unless the people also demand "special appropriations." In that event, the economy bloc will break wide open as each legislator tries to outdo his neighbor in "bringing home the bacon."

The final outcome of the economy fight now rests with the rank-and-file California voters. Every district must face the blunt question: "Which do we want most—special appropriations, or tax savings?" And if the orders come in for special appropriations, it will be the lawmakers' turn to bawl out the home folks!

Country Woman's Club Entertained By School Students

The Country Woman's club meeting was opened Monday afternoon with a period of silence in memory of Mrs. W. C. Colt, recently deceased president of the County Federation of Women's clubs.

The committee had arranged unusual decorations, using white floral containers, except one lovely basket of mixed flowers.

The president, Mrs. F. L. Hewes gave part of the business hour to the picnic committee to discuss and complete arrangements.

This year the club will have the pleasure of going to Villa Mortalvo, the former Senator Phelan estate, which was willed to become a home for artists and students. It is now being remodelled to fulfill its future destiny. Members will assemble at the library at 11 o'clock, June 5, where cars will be available. Those desiring transportation who have not already notified the committee get in touch with Mrs. S. Lloyd Selig. Dinner will be served buffet style at 12:30. Whether in need of transportation or not, notify the committee if planning to attend. Each person takes her own table service.

Mrs. Frank Jacobson, who presided in the absence of Mrs. Anthony Jurras, chairman, presented C. P. Klassen and the high school a cappella choir, and A. A. Thielke and a girl's string ensemble, who presented the interesting program of numbers announced last week.

The following students sang and played:

Rutherford Funeral Home Opened Sunday

After many weeks of remodeling and furnishing of the Hedegard home on Winchester Road, Campbell, it was opened to the public Sunday, May 14, with an invitation to all to visit the Rutherford Funeral Home.

Mr. David Rutherford, his fiancée, Miss Virginia Hare, of Dinuba and his mother, Mrs. Nellie Rutherford, received the guests and neighbors of Campbell and vicinity and conducted a tour, explaining the interesting features of the Rutherford Funeral Home.

Miss Virginia Hare, a talented musician, will become the wife of David Rutherford in June, and will assist him in the work. They will maintain their residence in this establishment and are, indeed, a very welcome addition to the community.

Here is an efficient and up-to-date Funeral Home. Mr. Rutherford is a graduate of the San Francisco College of Embalming, and has assisted in conducting many funerals in Oakland and vicinity and is capable of carrying out funeral arrangements perfectly.

One particular feature of this place is the privacy for the funeral, the atmosphere is more of the home-like comforts of one's own home plus every modern facility that is needed to perform the services with the utmost satisfaction. The parlor chapel is conveniently arranged and will seat 150 people and is complete in every detail. A special family room is considerably maintained.

Located in Campbell on the Winchester Road—Phone 66—away from the distraction of the traffic, the Rutherford Funeral Home has ample parking space. The beautiful grounds and its neat lawns and shrubbery give the institution an appearance of serenity as well as beauty. Rutherford Funeral Home is most modern and perfectly appointed and tactfully decorated for conducting the services in a home-like atmosphere.

The people of this community are indeed fortunate to have the services of this conscientious funeral director at their disposal. We wish to commend upon the fine service they are rendering in this important profession.

Visitors are welcome at all times.

The "Garden City Four" furnished fine entertainment during the afternoon.

The club desires publicly to thank the teachers and students of our schools who have made possible so many pleasant entertainments for its members.

Supt. W. H. Van Dyke as guest speaker gave a very enlightening review of the changes in school studies and courses made necessary and possible by changes in economic and social life of the country, and by added school facilities.

He noted the rapid growth of our high school, enrollment advancing from 557 for the 1937-38 year to 628 for the present school year.

He gave some interesting facts and per centages compiled in a widely diversified school study conducted at the Sequoia high school in Redwood City.

THE WORLD OF TOMORROW (?)

Seniors Present "The Patsy" Friday Night

By Don Martin

Campbell high school's class of '39 will present, "The Patsy," a three-act comedy of character, in the school's new auditorium Friday evening at 8:15.

With advance ballyhoo, the seniors have labeled the production the "most sensational, gigantic, stupendous, colossal" play ever attempted by a graduating class at Campbell, and judging from the splendid acting at rehearsals, "The Patsy" will live up to or surpass the extravagant praises of its sponsors. The attractive living-room set for "The Patsy" was created by the art students of Miss Mary Lewis and shop students of Milford F. Hughes.

The cast includes Doris Smith as Billy Caldwell, Florence Beneton, Matilda Bogner as May Har-Crawley, as Tony Anderson, Norval Cuttormen as Bill Harrington, Anna Jane Nelson as Grace Harrington, Bill Adamson as Patricia Harrington, David vento as Sadie Buchanan, Walter Flood as Francis Patrick O'Flaherty, and Charles Lane as "Trip" Busty.

Miss Gladys G. Gibson directed the preliminary rehearsals and Ely Dragoin of San Jose State college has directed the final rehearsals of "The Patsy."

Management of the play is as follows: LaVerne Brown, Theresa Stasi, and Angela Itakton, script attendants; Paul Borg and Melvin Stinson, stage managers; David Farley, curtain; Dale Irons and Gilbert Barr, electricians; Miss Mary Lewis, Miss Marial Carson, and Milford F. Hughes, staging; Viola Spragias, Edith Hughes, and Elizabeth Talia, flowers; Thais Shaves, Nadine Smeed, and Mary Parker, make-up; Thais Shaves, Elizabeth Howe, Adelaide Greco, Dorothy Pyle, and David Farley, publicity; Paul Borg, Mitchell Lobrovitch, and Mary Parker, tickets; Harriet Johns and Elizabeth Howe, costumes; Adelaide Greco, Gladys Hughes, and Nadine Smeed, properties.

The Junior Traffic Patrol under Captain Richard Benevento, will usher.

Express Thanks In Letter To The Campbell Press

Editor, Campbell Press: On behalf of the County Women's club, may I express our gratitude and appreciation for the notices given of our meetings and for the gracious and complete reviews of our programs and social events of the club year.

Many thanks to the Campbell Press and to its editor the kindest committee were Mrs. C. P. Klassen and Mrs. W. C. Bohnett.

New Theater Opened Here Friday Night

Patrons of Blanco's Campbell Theater on its opening night were delighted with its attractive decorations, lighting effects, comfortable seats and with both the screen and sound. In fact it fully lived up to its claims as a deluxe theater.

Carpeting is heavy, with deep padding, completely obliterating any foot steps. Stairways on either side of the lobby lead to a balcony of all lodge seats. Dressing rooms are also on either side of the lobby.

No finer illuminated sign adorns any theater of its size or of many larger, and a unique marquee that has called forth many complimentary remarks.

Campbell is indeed fortunate in having such a fine entertainment house, and showing as he does, high grade, first run pictures, Mr. Bianco is deserving of the patronage of this community and its environs.

Dr. Leone, D. C. Opens Offices Here This Week

Dr. R. Gilbert Leone, D.C., this week opened offices in the Curry building, directly opposite the post office in Campbell, for the practice of chiropractic, electro and physical therapy.

Dr. Leone was a student of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, dental department, of San Francisco, and a graduate of one of the finest progressive Chiropractic colleges in the country. He was at one time relief physio-therapist to one of the greatest industrial hospitals in the State, treating from thirty to fifty patients a day.

Dr. Leone's office in the Curry building is equipped for the latest and accepted physio-therapy treatment. He states that special attention will be given to nervous and chronic diseases.

The fact that Dr. Leone has selected Campbell for his location is an evidence of his belief in the continued growth of this community, which in turn extends him a welcome and a wish for success.

Elected Deputy Grand Master

Jack Murdock has received his certificate of appointment from the state grand master of the I. O. O. F. as deputy grand master of district 20, I. O. O. F. Jack has been a member for several years. of Morning Light lodge of Campbell, whose turn it was to honor.

Mrs. A. M. Standish Funeral Rites Held Friday

Mrs. Della Marie Standish, of Virginia Avenue, entered into rest at her home last Thursday, May 11, and last rites were held Friday from the Chapel of the Amos O. Williams Co., with internment in Los Gatos cemetery. Rev. J. H. Bennett conducted the service, and Amos Williams sang those two lovely songs, "In The Garden" and "Someday We'll Understand."

Born in Schever, Ill. May 3, 1884, she was married to Archie M. Standish in 1904. They lived at Hammond Indiana, removing to Campbell in 1919.

Although always somewhat delicate, Mrs. Standish entered into local activities as her strength permitted. For several years she was an active member of the Congregational church, and her attractive home and gardens were the scene of a number of pleasant social events. She had also been a much loved member of Pundita Circle, from which she was sincerely missed.

She leaves her husband and one son, Miles A. Standish, two daughters have died in infancy. Other relatives are two brothers Edward and Lewis Schuen, and a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Van Hoven, and her daughter, Mrs. Matlie Oltmanns, of Watseka, Ill.

The two ladies arrived Tuesday, May 9, and left this last Tuesday, May 11. Mrs. Standish and Miles have the sympathy of their many friends and neighbors in their bereavement, as the profusion of floral remembrances testified.

Mrs. Skillman Rites To Be Held Friday

Friends of Mrs. Hanna M. Skillman were shocked to learn of her death from a heart attack Wednesday, May 17, at her home on Winchester Road. Although not extremely robust, Mrs. Skillman had been attending to household duties as usual.

Her husband, Lambert Skillman, was quite seriously injured recently when a scaffolding on which he was working gave way, but is convalescent and was at her bedside.

Deceased, was a native of Minnesota, nearing her seventieth birthday. She was an active member of Orchard City Grange and had been of the Santa Clara Minnesota Association.

Surviving members of her family are: a son, Robert L. Skillman, who with his wife, made his home with his parents; a daughter, Mrs. Leona Phillips, of Park Avenue; a brother, John Adams, of Rochester, Minnesota; and sisters, Mrs. Emma Walrath, Minneapolis, and Mrs. G. H. Murphy, Duluth, Minnesota.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow (Friday) at 10 o'clock from the "Funeral Home" of Curry and Gripenstraw, with internment in Santa Clara City cemetery.

Mrs. G. W. Burrow Entertains the Pundita Circle

Pundita Circle met with Mrs. Burrow on May 10, with Misses Helan Laird and Annie Schulte assisting. Some time was given to reports of the County Federation held recently in the club-house of Coyote club.

A tentative plan of the program for 1939-1940 was presented and discussed. The committee for this program consisted of Mesdames Vaughn, Rucker and Stephens. The program for the day was presented the Misses Laird and Schulte, who read a very interesting condensed version of the play by Laurence Housman, "Victoria Regina," relating the love story of Queen Victoria.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. J. J. Pardee, assisted by Mesdames E. F. Pope, W. C. Thomas and M. E. Purmort.

Mrs. and Mrs. M. E. Purmort attended the State Pomona Grange

Kalfred Lum Speaker At Club Meeting Tuesday

Kalfred Dip Lum, Ph.D., special envoy to the United States from China, spoke of "The Far Eastern Conflict," at a dinner meeting of the Kiwanis club, Tuesday evening, at which the wives members of the Los Gatos club with their ladies were also present, some ninety in all.

Dr. Lum, who has remarkable command of the English language, gave an informal and thought-provoking discussion of the political situation of his country before war was inaugurated.

In some ways it has promoted the development of the country more than would have been possible in 150 years of peace. The interior of China is being unified and material growth advanced almost unbelievably. The highway constructed through to Indo China in so short a time is almost miraculous.

He stated that the Chinese will never accept communism as entirely opposed to their ideas of peace, justice, and democracy.

The New Life Movement which is governing the Chinese policies is based on four virtues, which are translated into English as: "Courtesy," "Righteousness (which means service to fellow members), "Thrift" (honesty), "Honor or Highmindedness."

Naturally he urged that this country which the Chinese regard as their friend, because it has never made any aggression in China, should not aid and abet its enemy by supplying their war needs by supplies or purchases.

President W. R. Morgan presided during the supper hour, presenting Lieut.-Gov. and Mrs. H. H. Buell, Past Lieut.-Gov. Ira R. Abbott, and Courtney Tremaine, D.D.S., president of the Los Gatos club.

Miss Martha Boyd sang two very pleasing solos, "Thine Alone" and "I Love To Hear You Singing," with Miss Edith Hughes as accompanist.

Mr. Abbott explained some new work being carried on in Campbell under the guidance of Harold Bramsen, county Y. M. C. A. secretary, and a member of Campbell Club. Several boys' groups have been organized with fine leaders and are engaging in instructive activities.

Rev. J. H. Bennett had the honor of introducing Dr. Lum, and next week the chairman will be Carl Field, with John J. Hayes, manager of the San Jose office of the State Board of Equalization present to explain the activities of the board.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—In the village of Woodbury, Ky., the son of a Czech-Slovakian immigrant was commended by his teachers for his excellent drawings of ships at sea. He had never seen any big ships, but liked them and had a good idea of what they looked like. Today, tooling the United States fleet of around 300 ships down into the Pacific, Admiral Claude Charles Bloch has converted his youthful artistic urge into a vast and precise knowledge of ships and their behavior—particularly fighting ships.

Churned Butter And Latin; Now Churns Oceans

Erect, ruddy and vigorous, quietly emphatic, the 60-year-old commander-in-chief of the fleet is a rarely spotlighted personage of tremendous responsibilities—technical, naval and administrative—as he quietly moves from Norfolk, not only his vast array of battle wagons, but 60,000 officers and men, nearly 1,000 planes and all the gear necessary for maintenance, operation, communications and fighting requirements.

On July 3, 1898, not long out of Annapolis, he was an ensign on the Iowa when Cervera's squadron of Spanish warships made its historic dash from Santiago harbor and was destroyed by Admiral Sampson's blocking forces. He was cited for "meritorious service" in rescuing Spaniards from burning ships of Admiral Cervera's squadron. In the World war, he commanded the transport Plattsburg and won the navy cross for distinguished service. During his 42 years' service on land and sea, he has held many high posts in the navy.

As a boy, the churning was his household chore. His brothers, now Louisville physicians, recall that he used to study his Latin book while churning and that he paced the "amo, amas, amat" to the beat of the plunger. They teased him about that and always found him ready for a fight if the provocation was sufficient. At any rate, studious, reticent and artistic, he followed his boyhood dream over far seas.

THE title of this particular article may well be the effective slogan of the modern world and the end of war if the words of Dr. Robert A. Millikan are to be taken at face value. Addressing a dinner of the Merchants association in New York recently, the famous physicist said:

"It was the fear of the bombing of London and Paris that prevented the beginning of another World war last September. The peoples of all countries, including the dictatorships, are coming more and more to the realization that such another war can only bring death and destruction to everybody—the end of civilization, not the world domination which the demagogic leader promises."

All Greek mathematicians to the contrary, Dr. Millikan believes that Achilles will overtake the turtle. That is, fleet-footed science has just about caught up with human stupidity, in spite of the latter's long headstart, and, with its command of new energies will romp on by into the "world of tomorrow," where there will be no war or rumors of war.

Dr. Millikan is possibly the world's most persistent champion of the social salvation inherent in scientific advance, and believes that his runner will break the tape ahead of "international wickedness, stupidity and folly." He believes that machines make jobs, rather than destroy them, and that the only way out is straight ahead.

Every once in a while he parachutes down from the stratosphere companionship of Einstein, Planck, Heisenberg et al, to bring a message to the market place—always hopeful, and usually a roundhouse swing at the demagogues and meddlers who cramp the scientists' style.

He leaves wide open a zone of Divine intervention if anything goes wrong in the laboratories.

A Nobel prize winner, chairman of the executive council of the California Institute of Technology, Dr. Millikan is an active liaison between the lay and scientific worlds, assuring both that everything will come out all right. Garnering many medals and prizes, enjoying world fame, he would have a lot to lose in a world crack-up. But his optimism is doubtless no mere "wishful thinking."

Mid-June Adjournment Fought By Congressional 'Peace Bloc'; All-Summer Session Forecast

CONGRESS:

Three Months to Go?

Long congressional sessions handicap U. S. business, but self-esteeming legislators also think their presence in Washington helps stop an impulsive President from sticking his foot into Europe's pie. When Alabama's Sen. John Bankhead offered a resolution scrapping controversial legislation to guarantee June 15 adjournment, there were enough objections to constitute a very vocal "peace bloc." Retorted Texas' Sen. Tom Connally: "Congress ought to stay right here . . . until all danger of involving the United States in war has disappeared. . . . No one can determine the question of war or peace but congress, and I know the people do not want war."

But war is only one of several major issues confronting a congress which did little during its first four months, and which cannot hope to adjourn with anything like a good record before mid-August. Problems, and their status:

Defense. Neutrality and armament are No. 1 issues of the No. 1 problem. After weeks of testimony, senate and house investigators seem compromised on the administration's "cash and carry" neutrality to permit arms sales to warring nations. Probable modifications: (1) elimination of a clause forcing the President to invoke neutrality within 30 days; (2) insertion of a clause permitting continued shipping to outskirts of a belligerent's territory if outside the danger zone. Since England and France would control the Atlantic in wartime, thus being enabled to pay cash and carry off U. S. arms, the bill would subtly answer Reichsfuehrer Hitler's snub of President Roosevelt. But Japan, Hitler's friend, could control the Pacific, which neutralizes the effect of neutrality.

Defense attention focuses on aviation, the President asking congress for $206,502,500 to expand the army's air corps and bolster Panama canal fortifications. Meanwhile, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has urged immediate expansion of aviation research facilities, in which the U. S. now trails Germany, Britain, Italy and France. As a result, congress will probably get requests for more aviation funds.

A third defense proposal: Nevada's Sen. Key Pittman urges extension of the U. S. coastal boundary from three to twelve miles, thereby facilitating resistance to an enemy blockade.

Social Security. Recommendations of the house ways and means committee, headed by North Carolina's Rep. Robert L. Doughton: (1) a top limit of $3,000 wages subject to payroll contributions for unemployment compensation; (2) reduction of 3 per cent unemployment compensation tax in states which have built adequate reserve funds; (3) payment of old age annuities starting in 1940 instead of 1942; (4) liberalization of U. S. grants for aid to dependent children, creating a 50-50 contributory status; (5) exemption from social security of students and nominally paid employees of non-profit organizations. Total estimated annual saving to industry and labor via the Doughton program: $825,000,000.

Taxation. Adjournment-bound Sen. Alben W. Barkley predicts tax revision would necessitate an all-summer session, moreover says it will do business no particular good to be kept in suspense about new tax possibilities. His forecast: That the house will simply extend "nuisance" taxes and the undivided profits levy, the latter expiring this year and currently yielding about $56,000,000. This brought retort from Mr. Doughton, whose ways and means committee has not abandoned hope of general tax revision. The problem: President Roosevelt and his cohorts have agreed not to shift the load from large shoulders to small ones, also that federal revenues cannot be reduced. The only solution: Reshuffle taxes on big corporations.

Relief. Rebel Democrats and all Republicans are fighting the President's 1940 relief budget of $1,750,000,000, partly for economy's sake and partly because the White House insists on keeping WPA intact. Under several pending bills, WPA would be abolished and much of the relief load returned to states.

Labor Act. Modifications in the Wagner act to pacify business were promised before the U. S. Chamber of Commerce by Nebraska's Sen. Edmund Burke. By early May, almost a month of committee hearings had netted nothing not already known: (1) That A. F. of L. and business oppose the present act; (2) that C. I. O. favors it.

Railroads. Though it is a major economic problem which almost caused a national crisis last fall until legislative reform promises stilled an employer-employee squabble, rail rehabilitation is well buried in committee. Some think the issue may be compromised in the interest of a shorter session.

EUROPE:

Appeasement Again

Moons may come and go before the world knows exactly why Russian Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinoff "retired" at the crucial moment of Anglo-French-Soviet solidarity conversations. But there is every reason to believe French-British treachery is responsible. The argument:

Russia sought an all-embracing military alliance with the two democracies, meaning all three must march if Adolf Hitler carried out his threat to occupy Danzig in defiance of the Poles. But Britain and France have never opposed German occupation of Danzig; indeed a growing appeasement bloc (allegedly including Prime Minister Chamberlain) has hoped the Reich would satisfy its thirst by taking Danzig. Thus the broadest pact France and Britain would offer Russia was a series of unilateral guarantees to Poland and Rumania, the Soviet to aid only if the other two powers had already gone to the assistance of those countries. Hence it was obvious that Anglo-French offers were hesitant, half-hearted and a product of necessity rather than desire.

Maxim Litvinoff's release was the answer. Litvinoff is part Jew, hated by Germany for his anti-Nazi and pro-League of Nations beliefs. His successor, 49-year-old Premier Vyacheslav Molotov, is a military-minded No. 1 aide to Joseph Stalin. Thus, the development Paris and London fear most becomes significantly possible: A Russo-German alliance which would dominate all Europe. Since Dictator Stalin recently charged capitalist powers are trying to force Germany and Russia into a needless war, and since Hitler's latest speech lacked its usual strong attack on the Soviet, this possibility is the more important.

VYACHESLAV MOLOTOFF

Adding to democratic woe is the Reich's notable success in neutralizing all Scandinavia and the Baltic states. Though Denmark, Finland, Norway and Sweden will probably refuse non-aggression pacts as superfluous, these countries have given neutrality assurances and thus helped crack the "encirclement" ring which Britain and France thought they had thrown around the Reich. Lithuania's neutrality was guaranteed at the time Memel went back to Germany, and other tiny Baltic states (Estonia and Latvia) are expected to fall in line.

In the Balkans, collapse of Russian-English negotiations would leave anti-Nazi Rumania, Greece and Turkey insecure, probably forcing them into the German sphere of influence. Observers believe the outcome may now be German occupation of Danzig in return for territorial integrity guarantees to all the Reich's neighbors, which is exactly what Hitler offered in his Reichstag speech.

BUSINESS:

Chamber Complains

Early this spring President Roosevelt declined a bid to address the U. S. Chamber of Commerce convention, knowing full well his New Deal would be hung in effigy. The President's idea was right; after five days of speech-making during which New York's New Dealish Rep. Sol Bloom was booed from the dinner table because he said business men should be glad to pay taxes for the privilege of living in a free country, the schism between White House and Big Business was wider than ever.

Keynoted Chamber President George H. Davis, Kansas City grain man: "It seems that the greatest concern is to create divisions between groups, to incite discord between management and worker, antagonism between 'Haves' and 'Have-Nots.'"

"Divisions . . . discord . . . antagonism."

Followed Hugh S. Magill of Chicago, president of the American Federation of Investors: "I am convinced that the great body of prudent, hard-working men and women for whom I would speak are refusing to put their dollars to work because they know from experience that when debts are incurred they must be paid if credit is to be maintained."

A good sample of several "programs" which chambermen will offer direct to congress, stepping over the President, was the five-point plan of Chairman John W. O'Leary of the executive committee: (1) remove "uncertainties" caused by superfluous government control; (2) revise dissection-creating labor laws; (3) revise tax laws to follow the rule of revenue purposes rather than reform; (4) stop needless spending "to bring approach" to a balanced budget; (5) modify restrictive laws to restore flow of capital.

Chambermen presented their plans to congress over the banquet table. Announced as the convention opened was a series of 26 dinners in which representatives of various branches of industry laid their complaints directly before well-fed congressmen and senators.

PEOPLE:

Latest Chapter

Most thoroughly bandied-about international rumor the past two years has been that the duke and duchess of Windsor would either return to England or visit the U. S., probably both. Latest chapter: On leaving a Paris showing of the American movie "Wuthering Heights," the duke was overheard to tell Son James Roosevelt: "Well, we will be seeing you in New York."

POLITICS:

Farley Forecast Verified

A master politician, Jim Farley called the turn in 1936 when hopeless Republicans carried but two states in the presidential election.

Recently the master spoke again, warning his Democratic colleagues that 1940 will bring a hard fight and that no landslide may be expected. Verification of the Farley forecast came but a few days later when the American Institute of Public Opinion, headed by Dr. George Gallup, polled the nation to discover that 52 per cent expect Republicans to win in 1940.

Trend

How the wind is blowing . . .

MONEY—Income payments to U. S. individuals during 1939's first quarter totaled $16,105,000,000, an increase of 2 per cent over 1938's comparable period aggregate of $15,788,000,000.

RELIEF—WPA plans to cut 900,000 from relief rolls this summer to compensate for next fiscal year's reduced budget. Total expected clientele on June 30, 1940: 1,500,000.

NAMES—Smiths, 418,000 strong, head "first 50 families" on social security rolls, followed by Johnsons, Browns, Williamses, Millers and Joneses in order.

DRINK—U. S. coffee consumption is gaining at expense of cocoa and tea. 1938 imports reaching record volume of 1,987,127,018 pounds while cocoa dropped from 619,050,789 pounds in 1937 to 453,096,547 pounds in 1938. Tea import for 1937: 95,000,000 pounds; for 1938: 81,372,424 pounds.

Star Dust

- ★ Any More Eligibles?
- ★ Unnecessary Request
- ★ Good Screamer Works

By Virginia Vale

THERE'S no telling where the current wave of matrimony that is sweeping Hollywood will stop. Practically all of the movie colony's famous romances either have landed their participants at the altar or will do so soon. Of course, Douglas Fairbanks Jr. rather startled the general public with his selection of a bride; the charming Mrs. Mary Hartford was what would be called, in racing circles, a dark horse.

When Kate Smith celebrated her ninth anniversary as a radio star she sang the four songs that she presented on her initial broadcast: "I Surrender, Dear," "By the River St. Marie," "Dream a Little Dream of Me," and "Please Don't Talk About Me When I'm Gone." When making up her program for her first broadcast she put in that last number because she felt none too sure that she'd be a success on the air.

KATE SMITH

Too bad a fortune teller couldn't have told her that she would lead the popularity polls for years as the possessor of the best voice in her field.

The next time that you hear your favorite screen heroine let out a piercing scream, the chances are that it will be Sarah Schwartz who actually does the screaming.

She is Hollywood's prize screamer, capable of curdling any audience's blood when she really puts her mind on it.

The other day Director James Whale was making a scene in "The Man in the Iron Mask" in which Louis Hayward, as King Louis XIV, was about to be attacked by assassins as he rode along in his coach. A good screamer was needed, so Sarah Schwartz was sent for, joined the milling throngs, and screamed her head off when Director Whale gave the signal. She's been doing that sort of thing for years, and works pretty regularly—earns more, in fact, than many a would-be singer who tries to make musical sounds.

It looks as if Bette Davis would be receiving another "Oscar" when the Motion Picture Academy Awards are handed out for this year. "Dark Victory" is the picture in which she turned in such a grand performance that even the people who never liked her work before are now dancing in the streets and telling all their friends about it.

Felix Knight, the young tenor who has climbed so far and so fast as a radio star, is so enthusiastic about his vocal teacher that he has established two scholarships, enabling two young singers to work for a year with Mebane Beasley.

"He took me," says Knight, "with almost no voice to speak of and shortly increased my range more than an octave." So now, each year, two more young singers will have the opportunities that Knight had.

If you listen to Jack Benny's Sunday night programs you're acquainted with "Rochester," his Negro servant. You can see him in "Gone With the Wind," as "Uncle Peter"; you probably saw him in "Jezebel" and "In Old Kentucky." His name is Eddie Anderson.

You've seen Bill Robinson, the great tap dancer, in pictures with Shirley Temple, of course. But did you know that they are good friends, and that he telephones her several times a week, no matter where he may be. He called her from New York recently, just before he went on the air—he talked to her mother, and asked if Shirley might be allowed to stay up late enough to hear his performance. Let's hope that she did; it was a good one.

Hopes Blasted

"Jack, dear," she murmured. "I hardly know how to tell you, but—soon—soon—there will be a third sharing our little love-nest." "My darling," he cried, "are you certain?" "Positive," she replied. "I had a letter from Mother this afternoon saying she's coming to live with us next week."

The tough said: "If your wife wasn't here I'd knock your block off." With that his wife left the room. A sporting gesture?

Nothing Doing

"Brown is a rotten sort of chap. I asked him to lend me two dollars for a few days and he absolutely refused."

"My dear fellow, this club's full of men like that. I'm another of them."

THAT'LL DO

"And what is a seasoned troop?" "One that has 'pep' and 'ginger' in it I guess."

Reminder

"What's that piece of string tied round your finger for, Bill?" "That's a knot. Forget-me-not is a flower. With flour you make bread, and with bread you have cheese. This is to remind me to get some pickled onions."

No Out

"There's a man outside, sir, who wants to see you about a bill you owe him. He wouldn't give his name."

"What does he look like?" "He looks like you'd better pay it."

Valor Retained

Valor is learned in the cradle lasts to the grave.

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of worldwide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions. These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for functional kidney disorder and for relief of the pain and worry it causes. If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be warning of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

SYNOPSIS

Richard Exon, a poor young Englishman, befriends elderly Matthew Gering, who at his death, gives him a statement claiming he, Gering, is Rudolf Elbert Virgil, Count of Brief, of ancient Austrian nobility who was betrayed 20 years before by his twin brother, Ferdinand, whose sentence for forgery he himself served. Ferdinand appropriated his title, property and daughter. Before he dies, Gering tells Exon there is a family secret, known only to the head of the house, to be found in the great tower at Brief, by a doorway none can ever find. Exon inherits his uncle's fortune and sets out to right Gering's wrongs. En route he encounters Percy Elbert Virgil, son of the villainous Ferdinand and sees him in conference with Inskip, a diamond merchant. He engages a valet, Winter, who hates Percy and meets by chance at a garage, John Herrick, who is a linguist and who as a youth served as a page at Gering's wedding, and had visited Brief. Herrick agrees to aid Exon. They establish headquarters at Brenda Revoke's farm at Raven, a few miles from Brief and make their plans. They find the castle almost inaccessible. They see a closed car occupied by Percy Virgil, a chauffeur and a woman. Hearing a dog scream, they see the chauffeur flogging it, just as a horse with a girl astride bounds along the path and is felled by a strung wire. The girl, unconscious, is picked up carefully by the chauffeur and woman, who then run away, after dropping her. Exon rescues the girl and carries her to his waiting car. He identifies the girl as Elizabeth, daughter of the disowned Gering, tells her of her cousin's plot to abduct him and takes her to Raven, where he tells her the story of her father and promises to go the limit to help her right her father's wrongs. Elizabeth has faith in her benefactor. Percy Virgil brings the police to Raven, announcing that two strangers are being sought for the kidnapping of Elizabeth. Herrick discomfits Virgil, tells of the morning's adventure, names a man called Max and hands the police a sealed envelope with the name of the leader in the abduction—Percy Virgil. Exon and Herrick suspect Percy of having sold the family jewels through Inskip. All realize the only solution is to find the Secret of Brief, which the impostor Ferdinand does not know. They decide to take possession of the Tower. Late one night after hard labor they force their way into the Tower, with Elizabeth along Exon and Herrick. There they begin their search for the secret doorway, working in silence against time. The search for the secret doorway is almost hopeless until they find a sliding panel in a step.

As might have been expected, the bolt was tight in its well, but it was not cemented in, and after another ten minutes I managed to wheedle it out.

I then took the mallet from Herrick and tapped the rise. At once the side I had tapped retreated before the blow, but the other side started forward out of its place.

"Pivoted," breathed Herrick. "It's hung on a spindle, just like a revolving door."

One hand on my shoulder, Elizabeth lowered her torch.

There was now before us a gap, where the rise had been. This gap was split into two by the rise itself, for this had simply been turned and was now presenting its edge, instead of its face. The torch immediately showed that the gap on the right was void—that is to say, on the side on which the rise had retired; but the gap on the left was framing a block of stone. And sunk in the face of this stone was a handle, or rude, iron dog . . .

"Go on," said Herrick. "Pull it. If a genie appears, so much the better. I've quite a lot of orders to give."

I laid hold of the dog and pulled . . .

At once the block slid forward, after the way of a drawer that you pull from a chest. And, as you may pull from a drawer clear, so I drew the block out of its housing, over the tread of the step which lay, like an apron to take it, in front of the gap.

The block was immensely heavy, for it must have been 12 inches deep, and when I had drawn it clear, it was all I could do to lift it out of the way and on to the tread above.

To do this, I had to stand up and lift it between my legs; but the others stayed where they were.

As I laid it down—

"Do you see it, too?" said Herrick.

"I—I don't understand," breathed Elizabeth. "I mean, how can that be there?"

"What is it?" said I, and stepped back to go down on my knees.

"It's time we went home," said Herrick. "That's what it is. When I run into black magic, that's where I get off."

Never had idle words so specious a warranty.

The block which I had withdrawn had left behind it no room.

Though I make a fool of myself, at least I will make this clear.

When you pull a drawer from a chest and lay it aside, you leave in the chest a space which is very slightly larger than the drawer which you have removed. But, though I had drawn out the block, there was no such space left. In fact, the gap was now framing another block of stone which resembled exactly the one I had taken away, except that it had no handle by which it could be withdrawn. And when I presently touched it, the same indefinite tremor told me it was not fixed.

"Can you beat it?" said Herrick, shortly.

"On the face of it, no," said I. "But there must be some simple reason for such a thing. I mean, these doings are ancient: there's no machinery here."

"There can't be a reason," said Herrick, "unless you're a conjurer. If you pick a brick out of a wall, you've a right to expect a recess. Well, there's the brick you picked out: but where's the recess?"

"There was a recess," said my lady. "There must have been. But now it's been filled."

"That's right," said I. "That's right. And I'll tell you another thing. It's got to be emptied again before we can put that block back in its place."

"Do you mean to suggest," said Herrick, "that a slab of stone of that size, fixed or unfixed, can shift to and fro on its own?"

"I have it," said Brenda's voice. "The thing is a counterpoise. My uncle has one at his farm. It is very old, but its movement is silent and sure as the flight of an owl."

Then was an electric silence.

Then—

That this interpretation was good, there could be no doubt, and we all began to go down the winding stair, surveying the walls, as we went, for some gap in their masonry. We were too much excited, I fear, to use our wits. Had we done so, we should have perceived that there was but one direction in which the balance could hang and that this would bring the scale which we wished to locate very nearly above the doorway by which we had entered the tower. However, as luck would have it, we now had no need of wits, but only of eyes; and as we emerged from the staircase into the small, square hall, we saw directly before us the interspace which we sought.

On the wall which faced us one of the panels had sunk—not very much, but five inches . . . exactly the height of the block which I had pulled out of the stair. The gap thus shown was breast-high and 15 inches in width. Beyond was an open space, and when I put in my hand, I could feel a faint current of air.

The panel hung on a chain, which was, of course, attached to the balance above. And so long as it hung on that chain, the panel could go no further, because the counterweight had no room to rise. So I took the weight of the panel, while Herrick deftly unfastened the heavy chain.

"Then I let the panel sink slowly into some slot in the stone . . ."

At last it came to rest, some six inches still protruding and making a sill to the doorway which we had discovered at last.

This gave to a winding stair, precisely resembling that upon which we had passed so many wearisome hours. In a word, with the hall for landing, the stair of the tower went on down, curling slowly right-handed, into the bowels of the earth.

For the others I cannot answer, but until the way was open and we were about to go down, I had never considered to what "the doorway" might lead: but now that we were about to discover the truth, I remembered the late Count's words and, with those for straw, began to make fabulous bricks.

"It may be that you can use it . . ."

I will not set down the pictures my fancy drew. Enough that they were all false. But I have this consolation—that not one man in a million would have predicted the scene which presently met our eyes.

Herrick declined to go down, but stayed in the hall with Brenda, "unless and until," said he, "my lady decides that she wants me on in this act." So I preceded Elizabeth, torch in hand.

For 36 steps we went down. And then we came to a chamber that had no door.

On the threshold I stopped and lighted a second torch, and my lady looked over my shoulder, to see what I saw.

The chamber was small—some fifteen feet by eight, and some nine feet high. Its walls and floor and ceiling were all of stone, and though there was no window, the air was by no means foul. (This, I afterwards found, was due to two vents—one low down in a wall, and the other high up at the opposite end of the room: but though I sought for their mouths, I never was able to find them, because they were too well hid.) Towards one end of the cell was a great oak stall, plainly very ancient and finely carved, and against one wall was a coffer, also of oak. There was no other furniture.

In the stall was seated a man—or what was left of one. His pose was natural. His head was up and was leaning against the back of the stall, his arms lay along its arms, and his trunk and his feet were well and truly planted on oak and stone. His clothes were those of the Fifteenth century. His tunic was of diapered velvet which the passage of many years had brought to shreds and tatters, if not to dust, but a jeweled belt was still girding the crumbling loins and a chain was sunk in the ruin about the neck. His right hand hung upon the legs, which were skin and bone, and a patch, that had been a cap, was still crowning the thick fair hair. This was inviolate. The face and hands were withered, but otherwise well preserved and dead. The eyes, which were wide, had a curious, sightless look and might have belonged to a man who was living, but blind; and the whole was in no way offensive, because, I suppose, there was no sign of corruption, but only of age. Indeed, had the hair been white, the figure would have been full of dignity: but the color of the hair was fatal, suggesting an old man's efforts to seem to be young—one of Time's shabbier jests, or the man had not seen old age.

On the coffer were lying three things. One was a skin of parchment—or part of a skin. Upon this had been written Latin, still to be read. By its side lay the translation, clearly inscribed upon vellum and made at some later date. And between the two lay a massive signet-ring.

As might have been expected, the documents told us the truth.

"Here sits Elbert, Duke of Austria and Carinthia, King of Hungary, slain by his host and liegeman, Rudolf of Brief, because he came upon him defiling his wife."

"With the fear of death upon her, Helen of Brief declared the following facts:

"That the King and she were secretly married, before he wedded the Queen and before she deceitfully wedded Rudolf of Brief. In proof whereof she offered her marriage lines signed by the Cardinal Gaddi, lately dead of the plague, whom God reward,

"That the first and third of her children, whom Rudolf believed to be his, were both the sons of the King."

"Rudolf made haste to apprise the Queen of the truth.

"For the sake of that injured lady, he undertook, on conditions, to hold his peace. Between them it was agreed:

"That he should hold to his witness the corpse of the King, himself providing another to take its place and be interred and entombed as though it were that of the King."

"That since Otto, whom he thought his first-born, was now IN TRUTH Duke of Austria and Carinthia, King of Hungary, he and his heirs should FOR EVER hold the right to call upon the heirs of her body in any stress, whose help they shall have WITHOUT FAIL by showing the King's great ring."

"That her heirs shall be so instructed in perpetuity."

Street Car Blamed for Discharging Cartridge and Wounding Pedestrian

How a man could be shot on a downtown street in broad daylight with several persons walking within a few feet of him, and yet none of them seeing anybody shoot at him—this was the mystery that the police were called upon to solve when Christian Knoll received a bullet wound in the hip while walking through the business section of a leading metropolis, reports William C. Dudgeon in the Detroit News.

The first important fact that the officers discovered was that, while several had heard the report, none had seen any flash, indicating that the bullet must have come quite a distance. As Knoll had been shot in the side next to the pavement it seemed certain that the shot had been fired from across the street.

This latter probability was not borne out, however, by the testimony of persons who had been walking on the other side of the street. In fact, they were all very positive in their assertions that the sound of the shot had come from the side of the street where the injured man had been at the time he was shot.

In their endeavor to reconcile these seemingly conflicting statements, the police were just about convinced that the shot had been fired from a passing automobile when word came from the hospital that the bullet, when it struck Knoll's hip, had been traveling an

"By Rudolf's order, Gollanx, a chemist of Innsbruck, preserved the corpse of the King. This he did according to a certain prescription which he had of a learned Venetian whose son he had saved. His raiment also he dipped against the corruption of Time."

"Dated the ninth day of March in the year of Our Lord one thousand four hundred and thirty-nine (the King being dead on the seventh, having lain in state till now and to be replaced this night) and written down word for word as my lord Rudolf hath commanded by his unworthy servant and clerk

"GABRIEL of LITTAL"

"Whom I slue whiles his ink was wet for he hath a long tongue and I have need of a boddy as he hath said."

"RUDOLF OF BRIEF."

The original postscript was laboriously written in German and poorly spelt. The translation was done in German from first to last, and to this had been added two lists—one of the Lords of Brief and one of the several Heads of the other House.

Elizabeth was trembling.

"Oh, Richard, do you know what this means?"

"It means you're a queen," said I. "But then I knew that before."

"No, no," she dabbed at the parchment. "That last name there. Not my grandfather's—the other. Harriet Vincentia Saying, Duchess of Whelp. She's still alive—and she's bigger than any queen. She's always known as 'Old Harry.' Her mother was English—as mine was, and if she'll take up my cause . . ."

"She must," said I. "It's a case of deep calling to deep."

"She's a law to herself," said Elizabeth, thoughtfully. "But if she does—well, next time you come to Brief you won't have to force any bars."

"That's right," said I, feebly enough. With a sudden movement, I set a torch in her hand. "And now I'll go for a pen. You must write your name here at once. Shall Herrick come down?"

"If you please."

I left her there and mounted the unworn stair.

The thing was absurd and childish, but now that I saw what was coming, my heart sank down. The "rough stuff" was over, and so my service was done. From now on, steps would be taken by a lady of high degree. Pressure would be put on the impostor: ways and means would be used which were out of my ken. And when the game had been won, I should be invited to Brief . . . where a servant would hold the door wide and another would take my hat. I should be ushered—I that had broken into the place, to set a queen on her throne . . . And then I should be presented to Her Grace the Duchess of Whelp, and the Countess of Brief would tell her how good I had been—I that had held a King's daughter against my hammering heart . . .

I suppose that my face was betraying my state of mind, for, as I stepped into the hall, I saw Herrick throw up his head and clap his hands to his eyes.

"Oh, I can't bear it," he groaned. "Don't say that after all this—"

The World's Oldest Toy

One of the largest toys in the world is more than 400 years old. It is a 47-foot wooden doll, named Lord Gayant, which has lived in Douai, northern France, since June 19, 1530. The mammoth doll was a bachelor for 35 years, but in 1565 he was provided with a wife, almost as tall as himself and worth four barrels of "new wine," according to the archives of Douai. Since that time, despite wars, seditions and panics, Lord and Lady Gayant have made their periodic appearances in Douai, and unlike the usual carnival giants whose life lasts only a fortnight, the wooden Gayants have been preserved through the centuries. They have many offspring. French Flanders possesses almost a hundred similar giants, ranging from 50 to 75 feet in height and fashioned of wood, metal or canvas. Each "giant" has his own legend and superstition and each is dragged out on local feast days.

What to Eat and Why

With Approach of Warm Weather, C. Houston Goudiss Advises Extra Care in Storing Foods in the Home

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

IT IS the proud distinction of America's food industries that notwithstanding the infinite variety of perishable foods which are constantly available, and regardless of the distances they have been transported, even the most delicate foods are delivered to the consumer in a fresh, wholesome condition, with all their fine flavor unimpaired.

The secret of this modern miracle is refrigeration. Vast sums of money have been invested in long trains of refrigerated cars, thousands upon thousands of refrigerated trucks, refrigerated warehouses and refrigeration equipment in stores. All this has been done for a single purpose: to keep food fresh and at its best until it reaches the home.

At this point the responsibility shifts to the homemaker. And if she falls down on her job, then all previous efforts to keep food free from spoilage have been in vain.

Homemaker's Responsibility

As guardian of her family's health, one of the homemaker's

most important tasks is to see to it that all food is safeguarded against contamination until it reaches her table. This means that perishable foods must continue to be refrigerated properly in the home. For only in this way can they be protected from the ravages of micro-organisms which are always ready to attack foods when conditions are favorable for their growth.

Two essentials are necessary for satisfactory food preservation in the home. First, perishable foods must be stored at a temperature of from 40 to 45 degrees Fahrenheit—never at a temperature higher than 50 degrees. Second, the right degree of humidity must be maintained. Too much moisture will encourage the growth of bacteria; too little will dehydrate fruits and vegetables and make them unfit for consumption.

Home Care of Foods

Both requirements are met by a good household refrigerator; and the homemaker who appreciates the importance of keeping foods sound and wholesome will regard an efficient refrigerator as an investment in good health. It is especially necessary that the food supply be properly refrigerated during the warmer weather of spring and summer, in order to prevent the consumption of dishes that may have become contaminated without any marked alteration in appearance, taste or odor.

Highly Perishable Foods

Milk is often regarded as the most perishable of all foods, because it is an ideal medium for the growth of bacteria. It is, therefore, essential that this splendid food be kept at low temperatures at all times. It should be put into the refrigerator as soon as possible after it is delivered, and kept there until the moment it is to be used. Milk should never be allowed to stand at room temperature for any length of time. For it has been demonstrated that when it is held at 40 degrees—an ideal temperature—before delivery, then allowed to stand at a room temperature of 75 degrees for an hour and a half, and again refrigerated, a rapid increase in bacteria occurs.

Other types of protein foods also present a favorable medium for bacterial growth when they are held at temperatures higher than 50 degrees. These include meat, fish, meat broths, gelatin, custards and creamed foods. It is advisable to keep these foods, as well as the milk supply, in the coldest part of the refrigerator.

Fruits and Vegetables

Fruits and vegetables soon lose their moisture content unless they are protected against warm, dry air; and they are likewise subject to the action of micro-organisms which result in decay. But when stored in a modern refrigerator, these mineral- and vitamin-rich foods can be kept in perfect condition for considerable periods, thus making it possible to take advantage of favorable market offerings.

Guarding Against Mold

As a rule, warmer weather also increases the problem of combating molds. For given moisture and warmth, molds will grow on almost anything. However, the most hospitable hosts are acid fruits, such as oranges, lemons, berries or tomatoes; sweets, such as jams and jellies; bread and meat. While molds are physiologically harmless if eaten, they definitely spoil the taste and appearance of food.

Mold growths can be killed by boiling. They are retarded by the dry circulating air of an efficient refrigerator. It is to allow for air circulation that berries should be stored uncovered—if possible, spread out so that the air can reach more than just the top layer.

Frequent inspection of all food supplies, including those in the bread box, and the prompt elimination of any items showing signs of mold, will help to keep it from spreading.

Constant vigilance on the part of the homemaker in caring for foods on hand will avoid a needless drain on the food budget and will safeguard the health of every member of the family.

Isn't This Why You Are Constipated?

What do you eat for breakfast? Coffee, toast, maybe some eggs? What do you eat for lunch and dinner? White bread, meat, potatoes? It's little wonder you're constipated. You probably don't eat enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean the amount you eat. It's a kind of food that forms a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a movement. If this is your trouble, may we suggest a crunchy toasted cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—for breakfast. All-Bran is a natural food, not a medicine—but it's particularly rich in "bulk." Being so, it can help you not only to get regular but to keep regular. You won't have to endure constipation, you can avoid it. Eat All-Bran daily, drink plenty of water, and life will be brighter for you! Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

QUINTS MEET THE QUEEN

Sturdy stock, those Dionnes!

With Washington society already a little breathless over the oncoming visit of the King and Queen of England, up in Callander, Ont., the Dionne quintuplets are taking it all in their stride.

These celebrated sisters are also going to have a visit with England's top royalty. This week they've gone into training for the event, learning to recite the proper salutation and to curtsy without falling over backwards or tumbling head-on at their Majesties' feet.

But this week, and for years, that meeting will be just one more event in their busy lives. Today, a bit of drilling in the niceties of court etiquette. Next Monday, a "how-do-you-do" to the king and queen in person. Week after that, a birthday party when the sprightly five-of-a-kind celebrate their fifth birthday. Next comes June, and with it the tourist parade sweeping into Callander and up to the Dionne play-yard.

But come tourists, photographers, cameramen, writers or royalty, it's all of one to the quintuplets. They're keeping their balance and, on the word of Dr. Dafeo, remaining normal, healthy youngsters. Yet it must be admitted these Dionnes do have an edge. These five smart girls have already amassed a tidy fortune well past the half-million mark. By the time their eighth birthday comes 'round, it's expected to be close to a full million dollars.

With riches and fame in their own right, Canada's five little queens needn't worry too much about that curtsy. They're going to get along!

A TIME TO SAVE

There's something wall worth thinking about in a comment made during the United States Conference of Mayors, held in Washington the other day.

"What guarantees have we," one worried mayor wanted to know, "that in 40 or 50 years from today the country won't be confronted with pressing, new problems—problems that will prove insoluble if accompanied by the debt burden that's piling up today?"

Uncheerful as tax facts are, let's take a look at that debt burden as it directly affects California.

Tax collections in California, by Federal, state and local governments, have increased 90 percent since 1933. In that year, government took $449,410,504 from Californians in taxes. In the fiscal year 1938 tax collections by these same governments totalled over $854,000,000.

Not counting Federal aid, California's total expenditures have risen from $63,784,351 in 1923-24 to $259,717,469 in 1937-38, a jump of approximately 311 per cent.

Little wonder that Merle Thorpe, business commentator, is moved to say, "The American citizen has had a wild night. He has gotten back home in the early hours of the morning a little bleary-eyed and maybe a little tax-conscious. He looks in his wallet and says, 'Well, I wonder if it was worth it.'"

At any rate, he knows his children and his country need a sturdy back-log of security against some future rainy day, and that the surest way of gaining that precious security is for America to start saving—now.

BETTER NEWS FROM HOME

Those "men wanted" signs have been coming out with increasing frequency in California during recent weeks.

That's one kind of sign whose finger points directly to improving conditions.

The last week of April, like the week preceding, found private industry putting fifty per cent more workers onto the payroll than a year ago during the same period.

Every week in April, moreover, showed a gain in the number of workers getting jobs over last year's record.

Not a landslide, not an end of relief rolls, but a healthy encouraging sign that very few states are equalling.

With homebuilding in California keeping up its remarkable pace, and automobile purchases showing a comparatively good record, California continues to hold fast to its place as one of the industrial white spots of the nation.

DON'T ROB YOUR CITY!

It's not only the tourist trek that's gathering momentum at this season.

There's also the influx of itinerant peddlers keeping their summertime date with California. With feet firmly planted against the door-jamb, these perambulating vendors will be unloading their wares at "super-bargain" rates to the accompaniment of a swift line of chatter to benumb the unwary listener.

But the "super-bargain" rates usually turn out to be higher than the cost of similar articles of better quality at any of the local stores, be they chain or independent.

That, however, is only one of the evils of purchasing from fly-by-night vendors. Why support "gypsy" traders who pay no taxes to the local community, pay rent for no stores, pay neither light, heat, nor water bills, give no employment to local workers, contribute nothing to local charity, or to community activities, as do the merchants and the network store managers of the local business establishments? They carry the bulk of the tax load, and they produce the jobs and payrolls that make the community a going concern. The wandering vendor produces none of these.

Is the itinerant peddler so important that he deserves this much attention? Government reports say "yes"! In cities where the peddler nuisance is not stopped, say these reports, approximately $11 per capita is taken out by these transient sellers and solicitors. Multiply that by the fat profit for the peddlers who "worked" it.

Buy at home, and support the men who help support your community!

POLITICS WARMS UP

If the public is getting a little dizzy looking into the swirling cauldron of political prophecies for 1940, let it take heart. So are experts.

"Garner and Dewey far in lead for presidential nominations next year," proclaim one poll.

"Humph!" retorts Secretary Ickes. That "humph," we predict, was tossed in the direction of Cactus Jack. "All balderdash. A conservative Democrat can never win. It will be a New Deal Democrat—or Roosevelt."

And the poll-takers keep adding up the answers—and asking the questions. "Roosevelt popularity drops," comes the word from one group of opinion takers.

"I'll take that with a grain of salt," is the gist of a quick rejoinder from General Hugh Johnson, often a sharp-tongued Administration critic. "The President isn't through yet. I'll count on him to produce an ace from up his sleeve when he wants it."

What's it all add up to? Just early season training, the man in the street concludes, for the great American game of politics which opens in earnest just a few months from now. And he'd be right!

KING COTTON GETS A LIFT

Even that dark cloud hovering over King Cotton has its silver lining.

Confronted with the plight of millions of sharecroppers and planters, the clamping down of foreign markets, and the desperate need of finding bigger markets right here at home, American enterprise and resourcefulness are today giving another fine demonstration of what they can accomplish.

They're engaged in a cooperative effort on a grand scale to help the South learn to help itself, well knowing that in America prosperity is indivisible. Better times in the distressed cotton kingdom mean better times in the rest of the nation, and California, it should be remembered, also has a big stake in cotton. So enterprisers, big and little, from Calexico to Bangor, are signaling their effort with a National Cotton Week, May 22 to May 27, to acquaint the nation with the infinite variety, economy, and value of cotton products. In answer to growers' pleas for a helping hand from them, nationwide network stores have mobilized all their resources to tell King Cotton's story in every corner of the land. That's more than the sixtieth time in the last three years they have answered similar calls for help with immediate action.

Producers know, if some legislators do not, a country this vast has a need, and a place for, large-scale distribution.

It's a wholesome antidote to sectionalism to find Town and Country joining hands, with planters and retail enterprisers the country over uniting to banish the big batch of trouble that haunts the cotton kingdom.

In this broad cooperative effort is the essence of wise statesmanship!

By BETTY BARCLAY

Reports indicate that many of us will be doing a lot of worrying before long. Food prices are going up. Our pocketbooks are not keeping pace. The problem "what to serve" is a real one.

Here's a timely hint. At the peak of the season, when prices are lowest, "put up" fruits, berries and vegetables for later use—when prices are high. Early in the season you may jar your peas. Later on, make pickles or a tasty vegetable butter from carrots, winter squash or pumpkin. In between, there are plenty of other "goodies" to be taken care of.

Stock your preserve closet with row after row of sparkling pint and quart jars of these foods. Through the transparent glass you may see the food and appreciate its quality. When you use it, you will appreciate the saving.

The glass jar will do a lot this season to keep upkeep down. Here are two of the many recipes that are enjoying popularity:

Peas
Use only young tender, freshly gathered peas. Shell, wash and sort according to size. Precook 3 to 7 minutes, depending on the age and size of the peas. Pack loosely to within 1 inch of top into clean glass jars. Fill to within 1/2 inch of top with water in which vegetable was precooked or boiling water. Add 1 teaspoon of salt and sugar mixture to each pint jar if desired. Put on cap, screwing band firmly tight. Process in pressure cooker, 60 minutes at 10 pounds; or in water bath, 180 minutes; or in oven, 240 minutes at 250 degrees.

Carrot, Winter Squash or Pumpkin Butter
6 lbs. carrots, pumpkin or winter squash
5 lbs. light brown sugar
5 lemons
2 tablespoons ground ginger
2 tablespoons ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon allspice
1 pint water

Peel vegetables; chop them fine or put them through food chopper. Add spices and sugar together with lemon juice, and rind put through chopper; let stand over night. In morning add 1 pint water; boil gently until vegetables are clear and soft and mixture thick. Pour into sterilized glass jars and seal.

The FARMERS CORNER

By RALPH H. TAYLOR
Executive Secretary
Agricultural Council of California

The action of the Associated Farmers of California in adopting a resolution urging that the migration of farm workers to California be discouraged is of more than passing significance.

California's migrant problem is one of the most serious problems confronted the State. Hundreds of thousands of refugees from the Dust Bowl and other impoverished areas have poured into California during the past decade of depression, greatly aggravating the State's relief burden, creating tragic social problems and seriously contributing to labor unrest both in the cities and in rural districts.

California, in fact, at the crux of the tremendous influx of penniless and destitute, seemed destined to become "The Poorhouse of the Nation." And although the flood of migrants has subsided to some extent, thousands still continue to flow across our State borders every month.

The Associated Farmers' decision to do everything in its power, in cooperation with other farm organizations and public agencies, to halt the stampede of the homeless and unemployed to California is doubly important in that it offers new refutation of the unfounded but oft-repeated report that California farmers are deliberately encouraging the migration to secure cheap labor.

Representatives of radical labor and relief organizations have been most persistent in spreading the story that California agriculture has advertised for farm workers in other states and is therefore responsible for the migrant invasion.

Farm organizations have repeatedly checked the story and found it utterly groundless. In all the years of the depression, there has been no attempt by California farmers to import farm labor from other states; in fact, there has been a consistent effort to discourage the influx. But "pressure group" organizers, seeking to place on agriculture and thereby strengthen their position in demanding government aid, still continue to repeat the discredited story.

As a matter of fact, it is now fairly well agreed by government agencies, welfare groups, farm organizations and other public and semi-public bodies which have studied the problem that the great migration to California was set in motion by the following factors:

1.-California's superior economic position, at least in the early years of the depression, as compared with most other states, particularly the Dust Bowl area and the Southern states; also the fact that California's comparatively mild climate was attractive to the homeless.

2.-More liberal relief and pension schedules in California than in other states—all dramatized and emphasized by the EPIC campaign of four years ago and the Townsend and "Ham and Egg" pension movements, both of which stemmed from California.

3.-Letters sent home to relatives and friends by early migrants here urging that they come to California. To many of the first migrants, living and employment conditions in California seemed far superior to conditions in the states they had left—and their letters to the folks back home helped to bring the influx to flood tide.

4.-The action of distracted relief workers in other states, at least for several years, in encouraging relief applicants to migrate to California on the theory that there was greater opportunity for employment here.

But regardless of the causative factors contributed to the unprecedented migration, there is now general recognition that effective action must be taken to stem the influx before California's financial resources are completely exhausted by the unnatural and impossible burden.

California farm organizations are cooperating with other agencies in every way possible to acquaint the unemployed and relief recipients in other states with the fact that this State already is over-run with itinerant labor.

It is vitally important, however, if the tide is to be checked, that California should put the damper on Utopian schemes and "live in luxury" relief and pension programs which have lured tens of thousands of destitute here on the assumption that California is The Promised Land of wealth and sunshine.

Government Reorganization Plan Fails to Merge Similar Agencies

Presidential Plan Will Perpetuate All Agencies Created in Last Ten Years; Taxpayer Will Save Little From Proposed Consolidation Move.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART

WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—As I have often observed in these columns, our federal government is such a huge octopus that it is difficult for one individual to gain a correct perspective of the machinery. That is to say it is mighty hard to sit down, thumb through the list and say which agencies are worthwhile and which are just another set of jobs. The thing is incomprehensible.

And so it is that when Mr. Roosevelt, exercising powers for reorganization of the government given him by the last congress, submitted "plan No. 1" the other day, few there were who grasped the scope of the move. Equally, it is true that few persons were able, even after study, to point out all of the good points and all of the bad points, so complex is plan No. 1. I believe, however, after talking with many authorities, it should be said that there are both good and bad points, and nobody ought to be so silly as to deny the statement.

The President's executive order has established three new major units of government. They are the federal security agency, the federal works agency and the federal loan agency. Into these three groups it is proposed to bring some 20 boards, bureaus and commissions, some great, some unimportant, but most of which, in the last few years, have been dangling at loose ends.

South Carolina's Sen. James F. Byrnes, whose bill to place relief administration back in the states' hands is, according to Mr. Bruckart, jeopardized by President Roosevelt's governmental reorganization plan for unifying and strengthening federal relief agencies.

Nearly all of them have been responsible directly to the President, or to the President and congress. Many of them worked at cross purposes; many overlapped, and there was the attendant jealousy, conflicts of authority, foolish resentment at each other's attempts to function.

It was evident that Mr. Roosevelt hoped the corralling of these maverick agencies would add to the efficiency of the machinery. That must be accepted as the fact because he told congress there would be a saving of only about $20,000,000 annually. The anemic taxpayer, therefore, gets nothing out of the picture.

Faults Will Accompany Virtues in Mass Move

But what of those who previously headed the independent, dangling, wandering type of bureau or board or commission? The plan proposes to make them subject to a new boss—somebody in between them and the President. It does nothing more than that. Close examination of plan No. 1 seems, therefore, to amount to a bodily transfer of each of these setups, taking with them all of their faults as well as all of their good qualities. At the same time, it is possible that such a grouping will accomplish something not visible on its surface. When several agencies, now operating in their own spheres, are brought under one general head, there is a chance that some of the overlapping of work will be eliminated. I mentioned at the outset the difficulty of discovering these conflicts. If they are brought together, therefore, someone surely will find them and eliminate them. If that is done, as it should be, there is just a twinkling light of a possible saving to the taxpayer. One should always remember, however, that few government agencies once created have ever been abandoned. The jobholders are the best lobbyists in the world.

Which brings us to the one definite objection that I have heard about the President's plan No. 1. That objection is that nowhere in it there is any effort made to reduce the scope of government. Or, to express the same thought in an affirmative manner: Plan No. 1 will perpetuate without exception every agency created in the last 10 years under the guise of emergency legislation, relief for the destitute and business reform.

That is the one factor to which criticism ought to be applied. There is no doubt in my mind at all that the President's advisors, in drafting the consolidation plan, or the President himself, dodged responsibility. I suppose it may have been too much to expect, yet it does seem a better job could have been done in that direction. Why, for example, was the reorganization of this phase of government activities worked out with nothing to show in the way of abolition of some of these numerous agencies? It appears to me that if the eight or ten separate units that have been brought into the federal security agency were so closely related, then some of those units could have been disbanded and such functions as necessary could have been lodged in the jurisdiction of the remaining bureaus. The same observation applies to the federal works agency and the federal loan agency.

Federal Relief System Remains Sore Spot

I believe the creation of a federal works agency will accomplish a great deal of good, but it does not solve one of the festering sores, now and long since showing on the body politic. I refer to the federal relief system. While there will probably be no more of the fighting over the back-yard fence like tomcats, as did Secretary Ickes and Harry Hopkins, the plan No. 1 does nothing to wipe out the pernicious political racketeering that Hopkins permitted as head of WPA. Nor does it keep government money from being literally forced down the throats of towns for building public power plants or for other uses, only to create debt upon the shoulders of those taxpayers, as Harold Ickes did.

There is nothing in the program either that will eliminate the use of federal funds, either through PWA or WPA, in spreading the effect of federal policies into state governments. I have written before of how federal officials actually "govern" states or counties or municipalities by laying down rules which must be met before the money has been handed over.

It is certain, therefore, that as far as public works is concerned and as far as public relief from the federal treasury is concerned, Mr. Roosevelt has accomplished almost nothing at all—except to make the heads of the two units report to one administrator who, in turn, will report to the President. This makes it appear, moreover, that a real need exists for passage of the bill drafted by Senator Byrnes, South Carolina Democrat and one-time staunch New Dealer that would place relief back in the hands of the states.

Concerning a federal loan agency, however, there ought to be praise. That is, there can be better administration, better co-ordination of policy, if the President selects a sound man to serve as its head.

Security Agency Is Plan's Hot Potato

The federal security agency, if we have to have such stuff, is the hot potato of the whole collection in plan No. 1. Into that group, there will be placed the social security board, the national youth administration, the Civilian Conservation corps, the United States employment service, the public health service and the office of education. Just why such things as the public health service and the office of education should be tossed into that madhouse, no one seems to know.

Under the reorganization act, congress has 60 days in which to examine the President's plan, and approve or disapprove. That is to say, congress must vote a resolution of disapproval within two months, or the plan becomes operative. There isn't the slightest chance that it will be rejected. One reason the proposal will not be rejected, if there was ever any chance of it, is that one of the Republican members of the house played dumb. Representative Taber of New York could not wait; he introduced a resolution of rejection on the day following submission of the plan No. 1, and he has just as much chance of accomplishing his purpose as a snowball has in the nether regions.

I do not infer that the President's proposal ought to be rejected. That might be the conclusion after experts have gone through it with a fine-toothed comb. On the surface, however, Mr. Taber provided no basis of prestige for the Republicans by his act, nor did he demonstrate his value as a national legislator. As for Republican tactics, especially on such matters as government reorganization, they ought to distinguish between issues and making noise. I have a suspicion that Mr. Taber's resolution was as much welcomed by Democratic Leader Rayburn as it was disliked by the Republican side of the house. Certainly, it will provide a measure of Democratic solidarity.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Refrigerator Deodorant.—Put a piece of charcoal on one of the shelves of the refrigerator. It acts as an absorbent for all odors and purifies the air.

Make Shakers Work.—To keep the metal tops of salt shakers from corroding, cover the inside with melted paraffine. While the paraffine is cooling the holes may be opened with a pin.

Onion Odor.—A little mustard rubbed into the hands after peeling onions, will remove the disagreeable odor.

Mice Avoid Camphor.—Pieces of gum camphor placed near books on the shelves will protect them from mice.

Hot Water Marks.—Should you spill hot water on a polished table and it leaves a mark, rub it gently with spirits of camphor and finish off with a gentle rubbing of furniture polish.

Waste Tea.—Pour left-over tea into a bottle, add a drop or two of glycerine, and use for cleaning windows.

Easy on the Curtains.—Before washing net or lace curtains, steep overnight in a tub of cold water to which has been added half a cupful of ammonia. This draws out the dirt without soap and rubbing. Next morning rinse the curtains and squeeze through warm sud.

Premier Has Done the Lion's Share of Work

A photograph of the Australian premier with his wife and their 11 children appeared recently in a Danish newspaper.

"Prime Minister Colonizing," was the title of the picture. Then the story below the scene went on to say: "Australia is a very thinly populated country. The English government is therefore doing everything possible to promote colonization, and excellent work in this direction has already been accomplished by the Australian prime minister (Mr. Lyons). He is seen here with his wife and 11 children."

He should have the premier award!

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP
If you are peppy and full of fun, men will invite you to dances and parties. BUT if you are cross, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls along who are full of pep. So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember for 3 generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.
